BEIRUT — Israeli Air Force

planes attacked Palestinian areas near the southern Lebanese port city of Sidon on Saturday, and as many as 41 people were killed and 40 were wounded.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said 41 had been killed, but the local police put the number of dead in the three consecutive air strikes in and around the Ain Khilwe district at 38.

The dead and wounded were the largest number of casualties in 20 air attacks by Israeli jets in the Sidon area this year, and a statement by the PLO denounced the attacks as causing carnage. A Moslcm radio station, Voice of the Homeland, described the action as savage.

An Israeli Army spokesman quoted by the state radio said the targets hit were used by terrorist groups that were planning raids against Israel. The spokesman said that all planes bad returned safely to base and that the pilots had reported accurate hits.

Witnesses said that three buildings used by the Fatah group of Yasser Arafat, the PLO chairman, bad been destroyed and that several people were buried under the dehris. The huildings were at the edge of Ain Khilwe, the largest Palestinian district in southern Lebanon and the main guerrilla stronghold in the area.

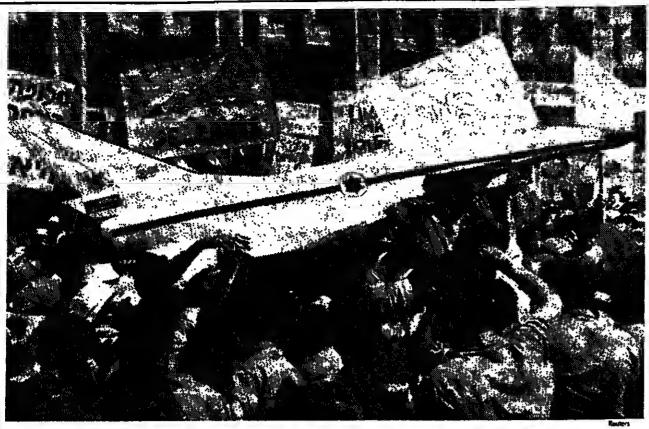

Although the Israeli Army spokesman said the raid was not in retaliation for any particular guerrilla action, it coincided with an increase in Arab attacks in Israelioccupied territories.

In another development, an official of the Italian Embassy was released Saturday, five days after he was kidnapped in West Beirut, which is patrolled by Syrian troops.

The official, Joseph Khoury, who has dual Italian-Lebanese nationality, appeared unharmed at a news conference at the Beirut residence of Justice Minister Nabth Berri, who leads the Shiite Moslem movement Amal.

Southwest Contends With Cactus Rustlers

The illegal trade in desert plants, while not as lucrative as the traffic in drugs, parrots or illicit furs, is growing in the American Southwest, The New York Times reports. The increasing international popularity of cactuses has made poaching and smuggling profitable. Ironically, the problem has been compounded by the trend to desert landscaping among residents of the Southwest, smengly encouraged by government officials to conserve water and re-duce pollens that may cause allergic reactions. Particularly popular for ornamental uses are barrel and hedgehog cactuses, yucca and sagnaro, the tall, multiarmed cactus that is the symbol of Arizona

It takes more than 100 years for a saguaro to reach a height of six feet (1.8 meters). It brings $15 a foot at retail, plus $15 to $25 an

We are proud to announce the merger of Moët Hennessy and Louis Vuitton

On September 2, 1987, the shareholders of Moët Hennessy and Louis Vuitton approved the merger of the two companies, creating LVMH Moët Hennessy Louis Vuitton.

The new company will be preeminent among world suppliers of highest quality luxury products, with estimated 1987 sales (78% outside France) of 13 billion French francs and net income of 1.3 billion French francs. With a market capitalization of more than 26 billion French francs, LVMH ranks fourth on the Paris Stock Exchange.

LVMH brings together the following major brands, listed in the order they were created, beginning in 1729:

Ruinart, Moët & Chandon, Dom Pérignon, Veuve Clicquot, Henriot, Mercier, Canard-Duchêne (champagnes) and Domaine Chandon in California.

Hennessy (cognac).

Louis Vuitton (luggage and leather goods).

Roc, Parfums Christian Dior and Parfums Givenchy (perfumes and cosmetics).

Its resources strengthened by the merger, LVMH Moër Hennessy Louis Vuitton will seek out new opportunities in fields compatible with its historic traditions of luxury and highest quality.

ical fibers, eight pairs of footwear, 800 kilos of cereals and 100 kilos of mear. Since the end of World War II, and in the course of building a socialist society, Czechoslovakia has seen telatively swift development and now has a solid industrial base and a successful, cooperative agricultural sector. The standard of living is steadily rising, unemployment has ceased and the free education and health services are being expanded. This does not mean, of course, that Czechoslovakia's economy is problem-free. The country still imports fuel, power and raw marerials, resources that must be paid for by exporting processed products, particularly those of the engineering industry. Czechoslovakia is involved in world trade, so it must react sensiovely to the problems of a global economy. It must also endeavor to improve its performance and the efficacy of goods exchange.

Given all these factors and the society's growing needs, a new development strategy has been approved by the 17th Congress of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia. This strategy of accelerated social and economic development is based on an intensification of the entire national economy. It involves a fundamental restructuring of the country's ment on the principles of so-

The key targets of this development program are to raise the standard of living still further by the year 2000; to meet the population's needs on a qualitatively higher level: and to strengthen its life and social certainties. Personal consumption should increase by at least 50 percent. In harmony with this trend, educanonal and public health services will be refined and close attention paid to ecological

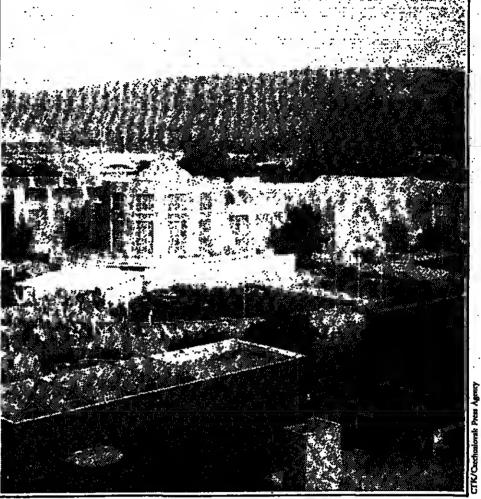

In keeping with these aims, social production will be developed and the national income should grow by more than two thirds. The basis of this growth will be consistent scientific and technical progtess: the comprehensive automation of mass producoon lines as well as the development of nuclear power gencration and of new kinds of materials and biotechnology.

A key tole will be played by the engineering and electrical engineering industries which - on the basis of intensified international cooperation must provide advanced machinery and equipment to accelerate the modernization of the country's entite manufacturing and technical base and fuel the transition toward fundamentally new processes and techniques. Speeding up the process and stepping up the quality, teclinical standard and reliability of products will make Czechoslovakia increasingly competitive with the world's leading manufactur-

These tasks ptesuppose deepening cooperation and the division of labor between socialist countries, especially with members of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance. At the same time Czechoslovakia will also develop economic relations with non-socialist countties as much as possible.

The first phase of this longterm strategic policy will take place between 1986 and 1990, the period covered by the

International Trade Fair in Brno

Eighth Five-Year Plan of the Development of Czeciioslovakia's National Economy.

During the preceding Five-Year Plan (1981-1985) real growth was 11.5 per cent. By 1990 the national income is due to grow by 19 percent.

In keeping with these aims the Plan envisages a reduction of the energy intensity of the national income by an annual average of 2.9 percent as against 1.5 percent during the Seventh Five-Year Plan, It also foresces a reduction of the metal consumption intensity by an annual average of 3.5 percent; the reduction of the transport intensity by 12 percent; the teduction of the share of material costs in output by 1.5 percent and the accelerated growth of social labor productivity by 17 percent (as against 9.2 per cent in the Seventh Plan).

The country's investment policy - as the instrument of change - is subordinate to these tasks. The overall volume of capital investment in construction will be toughly 10-12 percent higher than it was duting the Seventh Plan. Based on long-range objecrives, there will be a marked change in favot of machinery and technological supplies. Ptionity will be given to those investments that telate to tationalizing fuel and raw material consumption and that support State Target Programs, implement scientific and technical progress, raise the effectiveness of foreign trade and improve environmental pro-

Industry will play a decisive part in the creation of material resoutces. During the Eighth Plan, production is due to increase by 15.8 percent and should become far less energy intensive. This particularly applies to the areas dealing with fuel and energy production, metallurgy and building materials. At the same time, the significance of the engineering industry (especially electrical engineering) will increase and a number of microstructural changes will raise both quality and technical standards, ensuring a flexible approach to the demands of foreign and domestic markets. The share of the engineering and electrical engineering industries should increase from 29.1 percent in 1985 to 33.2 percent in 1990. Growth areas will include electronic components, computers, measuring and laboratory technology, petiphetal equipment consumer goods. The Plan also envisages the rapid development of traditional sectors such as heavy and general engineering.

The dynamic development of the chemical industry will be seen in sectors such as crude oil processing, petrochemicals and small-tonnage

Light industry will develop fastet than during the Seventb Plan by a rate of 15.8 percent. The main emphasis will fall on the quality and variety of goods produced. The introduction of progressive technologies foresees the selective import of machine equipment from non-socialist countries.

A further aim is continued growth in the construction industry, with output rising by almost ten percent by 1990. This will involve existing construction projects, as well as modernization, teconstruction and repair. The imports of machinery and equipment for capital investment construction from the non-socialist countries will double duting the Eighth Plan. The accelerated growth of petsonal consumption (due to increase by 2.3 percent annually) will fuel the demand for available stocks of goods.

The Plan envisages a further increase in sales of industrial goods to the retail sector, while assuring the stable supply and increased variety of foodstuffs. As far as industrial goods are concerned, the emphasis will be on innovative engineering products as well as a greater variety of products from the clothing industry. Continued improvement in the domestic market does not depend solely on the overall volumes, but also on the realization of a number of structural changes in their con-

The Eighth Plan is particularly concerned with the resolution of ecological problems. The Plan has already committed 17.1 billion Czechoslovak crowns to specific ecological projects, notably water pollution. Investments will also be made in the reduction of air pollution and treatment of urban and industrial waste. The investment allocated for such projects under the Eighth Plan is twice as large as that of the previous one.

The targets of the approved Eighth Plan are - especially in comparison with its predecessor — truly challenging. However, in view of the requirements of society and the need to keep pace with worldwide developments, they are considered to be minimal. ## Trade Promotion: A Matter of Mutual Interest

IKE most members of the international community, Czechoslovakia is striving to promote economic cooperation and expand its foreign trade despite the growing complexity of international relations. With foreign trade directly influencing one third of the national income. Czechoslovakia's economic and social development depends on such links. While industrial production depends on imported raw materials, other sectors are geared to exports.

This connection between the national and world economy brings numerous advanrages resulting from the international division of labor. However, it also carries the attendant risk of criocal developments on the world market. notably in the price or monetary sphere. Czechoslovakia has successfully overcome the majority of these thanks to stable cooperation - developed in a planned, long-term way - with the socialist countries. Its natural orientation toward the immense Sovier Union market is shown by the sheer volume of mutual trade. But Czechoslovakia also acovely promotes higher levels of trade with other developed and developing countries.

Unfortunately, political and economic relations with such states are tainted by an atmosphere of confrontation and growing expenditure on armaments. This creates a low level of political trust which, in turn, exerts a negative influence on virtually every other field Czechoslovakia therefore regards the lessening of tension and restoration of international confidence as the primary concern of the world community. The common aim must be peace, a prerequisite for resolving urgent global problems. Such problems, naturally, include the development of a global economy.

The high iodebredness of developing countries, financial instability and monetary relations are among the modern phenomena that complicate international economic relations. The connection between restored confidence and overall development is indispurable. A broad program of disarmament will do more than safeguard international' security and confidence; it will release resources for global economic development.

In Czechoslovakia's view, the numerous political and social consequences of the indebtedness of the developing countries make it one of the gravest problems on the international scene. Resolving the issue is clearly related to other urgent issues such as restructuring international economic relations on a just, democratic basis. For instance, Czechoslovakian trade with developed market-economy countries would be enhanced by the removal of protectionist measures and restrictive bans on imports.

Czechoslovakia's willingness to promote worldwide cooperation has been reaffirmed by a number of recent political and economic decisions. The same principles are also embodied within the restructured. framework of Czechoslovakia's internal economic mechanism. The aim is to raise the efficacy of the national economy and stimulate the development of morually beneficial cooperation with partners

The Czechoslovak economy can only develop successfully if its trend towards intensification is strengthened and accelerated. By so doing, productivity will increase; the scientific and technical level will improve; and the progressive elements of a restructured economic mechanism will assert themselves.

The current program of modernization and reconstrucoon presupposes acrive support of all factors which increase effective production. They, in turn, will be reflected cal products and timber and replace them by other items. Structural reshaping, while changing the assortment, will allow the existing share of machinery and equipment to be maintained.

Foreign trade prospects are naturally linked to further economic, scientific and technical cooperation with CMEA members. This is based on very solid foundations and underpinned by bilateral as well as multilateral long-range programs in addition to longterm trade agreements. Apart from the tradioonal forms of cooperative trading, higher forms - such as direct oes, scienofic research groupings, joint investments and industrial cooperation - will increasingly characterize relations with the Soviet Union and other CMEA members. They will become the principal means of economic cooperación as convencional ways of trading encounter commodity and quanotative barriers. This particularly applies to re-

by improved export performance and the consolidation of Czechoslovakia's role in the international division of labor.

Foreign trade directly reflects the uncompromising demands of the world market. Export performance can be improved by better commercial activity and organization but -more importantly - by offering a variety of new products that correspond to international needs. The value that foreign markets place on Czechoslovakia's products is crucial to trade relations. It is an expression of the overall potential of the country, of the capabilioes of its inhabitants.

The fundamental aims and tasks of foreign trade under the present Five-Year Plan can be summed up simply. The lead of the export growth rate over the growth of the national income will continue. The annual growth rate of roughly 3-4 percent means that, by 1990, Czechoslovakia must increase its exports by 15-20 percent and its imports by 14-18

Greater effectiveness can be achieved by modifying the structure of those exports. The aim is to reduce the export of fuels, oil products, metallurgilations with the Soviet Union, but also to those with the German Democratic Republic, Poland, Hungary and Bul-

While maintaining a positive balance of trade, Czechoslovak exports to the non-socialist countries are due ro grow by over 14 percent by the end of the Five-Year Plan, and imports are due to rise over 15 percent. Total exports of machinery to the non-socialist countries are dife to increase 40-50 percent by stepping up the penetration of developed markets. Conversely, Czechoslovakia will increase its imports of new technology. Apart from traditional trading partners - the Federal Republic of Germany and Austria — there should also be a more rational approach toward cooperation with Finland, France, Italy, Denmark, Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands. Dynamic trade development should also benefit from talks with the EEC. Czechoslovakia will deepen the contacts between individual firms and cooperate with Western concerns on the principle of mutual respect and Trade with the United States, on the other hand, is limited by unfavorable commercio-political conditions. No bilateral contractual basis exists and, in view of the fact that in 1951 Czechoslovakia was denied its most-favorednation status, exports to the U.S. are subject to an autonomous customs eariff with high customs charges. Moreover, Czechoslovak organizations are prohibited from receiving certain credits and Government guarantees. Czechoslovakia's export structure is thus restricted to those items that can bear considerable customs charges and still reach acceptable levels of effectiveness. The restrictions on U.S. exports of advanced technology and equipment, listed by CO-COM, also contribute to the losses that run into scores of millions of dollars annually. Czechoslovakia will continue to make concerted efforts toward restoring most-favorednacion status and concluding a trade agreement to establish the level of economic contact that it already maintains with he majority of the world.

In relations with developed capitalist states, Czechoslovakia will concentrate on stepping up the part played by machinery, equipment and transportation in overall exports. The existing share of this group is approximately 12percent, disproportionately low in comparison with their exports to the socialist countries (60 percent) and developing countries (70 percent). In the future, these will no longer be compensated for by ther exports of raw materials or consumer goods, so this sector will determine the dynamic of future export expansion. Industrial cooperation with non-socialist countries is still at a low level although, the number of individual projects has substantially iocreased. Currently numbering about 140, their output in terms of exports remains very low: confirmation that they still only touch the fringe of Czechoslovakia's manufacturing potential. Much the same concern applies to the introduction and expansion of higher forms of industrial cooperation and joiot ventures.

Long-standing, systematic cooperation between the chemical industry and Western chemical concerns has demonstrated the sales opportunities on world markets even at times of economic recession. But mutually beneficial cooperation is still not used enough by other branches of the national economy, above all by the engineering industry. Czechoslovakia is currently moving toward conceptual, coordinated and longer-term cooperation with selected firms which are long-standing trading partners and have an interest in promoting such cooperation as well as a sense of the realiocs in a divided world. Firms in West Germany, the Nerherlands, Italy, France, Great Britain and Switzerland are currently involved. Strengthening the long-range element of cooperation and anchoring various kinds of cooperation in contractual form will contribute to a deeper mutual understanding between them and the Czechoslovak foreign trade organizations.

Improving the internal economic mechanism should creare a posiove change in the quality, technical standards and levels of service, as well as a more flexible approach to innovacion. These tasks are based on a realistic estimate of the market situation as well as the results of Czechoslovakia's export drive. Seen from this viewpoint, the consistent implementation of long-term export-oriented programs is very important and applicable throughout the present Plan.

This year's results are eagerly awaited. Like other countries in the socialist community, the Czechoslovak Socialist Republic is actively seeking to harmonize the planned economy with perceived market needs, to encourage worker participation in management and reach berter results. The Government is determined to improve the quality of work, aided by new economic rules and the verification of new management forms. Certain of these measures were specifically adopted to deepen cooperation berween foreign trade organizaoons and industry.

For example, the next stage of reorganization should preserve the advantages of the existing system while leading to a mixed model with specialized foreign trade organizaoons acting as non-state socialist organizations. This would obviously bring commercial and cost advantages. Similarly, strengthening the holding companies so that manufacturing organizations — as shareholders — exert a greater influence on their management provides motivaoon and material advantage.

Major manufacturing organizacions will be able to conduct foreign trade, primarily in the export field, leading to increased export performance and more effective commercial operation. The manufacturing and economic organizations are responsible for scienofic, rechnical and industrial cooperation, product specialization and joint production projects at bome and abroad, including direct ties with CMEA members. Such schemes can call on Czechoslovakia's foreign trade organizations to prepare the relevant contracts.

Fine-runing the mechanisms of foreign trade should strengthen the long-term economic independence and responsibility of manufacturing. organizations. The goal is clear: to increase the adaptability of Czechoslovak enterprises to meet the changing demands of foreign markets; to speed up the production of export goods; and to ranonalize the structure and effectiveness of foreign cooperation. Czechoslovaia is thus clearly interested in cooperation that would be economically attractive to both sides. It has sufficient partners for such cooperation in the world and expects both their number and quality to increase.

Between Poor and Rich

Ethiopia remains the world's poorest country. That is not astonishing, given the harsh land, the incompetent Marxist government and the entrenched civil war. Its GNP per capita runs at about $110 a year, compared with $18,250 currently in the United States. The next-poorest country is Bangladesh, which is better governed but desperately overpopulated.

The rankings come from the World Bank, which does annual estimates of GNP and nther illuminating numbers for most of the world's countries. The purpose is not merely to suggest the disparity between richest and ponrest, which is pretty obvious, but to provide some reliable sense of the enormous variety of conditions in between, and of the rate at which things are changing.

At precisely the midpoint of the list stands Jamaica, with half the countries richer than it and half poorer. Living very close to the United States and the inescapable comparisons, Jamaica thinks of itself as poor. In fact it is middle-class. Life expectancy, a good measure of living conditions in general, is 73 years there — far longer than in any but three or four other Third World countries and very close to the average expectancy of 76 years in the wealthy industrial democracies. Part of the explanation is Jamaica's school system, and most of its children of high school age are actually in school. Thanks to this high degree of literacy, Ja-cans, in every respect but income, than the unfortunate people of Ethinpia or Bangladesh have in common with them.

Other countries clustered around the median on the World Bank's list are Botswana. Paraguay, Peru and Turkey — a very mixed group. Botswana is one of the great successes of development economics. At independence 21 years ago, it had one of the lowest incomes in the world, as most of the black African countries still have. Today, despite drought and a vulnerable location on South Africa's border, it is halfway up the World Bank's income ladder. In contrast, Paraguay stagnates under the rule of General Alfredo Stroessner, its president for the past 37 years. Peru, deeply divided by race, geography and social class, devotes itself to a kind of populist politics that has proved to be death to economic growth. Turkey, nn the other hand, is growing steadily under a model plan for dealing with foreign debts and inflation. None of these middle-class countries is rich, but none, by the standards of the planet as a whole, can be called poor. The World Bank has argued for years that to divide the world into two zones, the developed and the underdeveloped, is misleading as well as patronizing. The gradations are infinite, and there are no longer clearly defined lines among the categories.

Fewer but Longer Lives

The number of babies born in the United States dropped last year, but those babies are likely to live longer than any previous year's crop. Both the birth and the death rates declined in 1986. The National Center for Health Statistics bas published the numbers for last year, the most significant of which is the fertility rate - the number of babies born in relation to the number of women of childbearing age. It was the lowest in American experience.

The life expectancy for American children born last year was 74.9 years. That gives each of them an even chance of seeing the year 2061 — and a bit more, since that life expectancy is based on 1986's death rates, which are likely to keep falling through the children's long lives.

But in most other developed countries people live longer. According to a Census Bureau estimate, the longest lived are the Swiss at nearly 78 years - no surprise, with all that fresh mountain air and those high incomes. But lives are very nearly as long in Hong Kong, which has neither. Japan also ranks almost as high, as do some of the Scandinavian countries. Life expectancy in Canada is more than two years longer than in the United States, a remarkable difference between two countries whose societies are in many ways similar. Spaniards, Greeks and Italians, although less wealthy, also live significantly longer than Americans.

Infant mortality has been steadily declining in the United States, but, again, it is still much higher than in most other developed countries. That statistic reflects not only medical resources but also a society's ability to organize itself to make the most of them - an American failing. In 1986, of every thousand live births, 10.4 infants died. In Japan the current rate is 5.8 infant deaths per thousand, bardly more than half as many, Canada's rate is 7.5 infant deaths. In Ireland, a very poor country by American standards, the rate is 7.7.

But it is the decline in fertility rates that casts the longest shadow forward. It will strongly influence not only Social Security taxes two decades from now but the whole breadth of national politics and culture. The very high fertility rates of the 1950s swung the country, in the late 1960s, into an infatuation with youthful music, clothes and interests. While those years, like the children, developed habits that required correction, they bad much charm. It would be melancholy to think that the mood might slide to the other extreme two decades from oow, turning Americans into a population gripped by the concerns of the elderly medical care, stability and security. Fortuoately, despite the trends, births still outoumber deaths by the substantial ratio of seven to four in the United States.

- THE WASHINGTON POST.

Help Save Rain Forests

endangered environments like the Amazon rain forest, one that also eased the foreign debt burden blocking Third World development. Environmentalists and development proponents, often at odds, would cheer. Thanks to the Frank Weeden Foundation of Connecticut, there is no need to imagine. It has provided a way to buy, in effect, bonds for biology.

In July, Conservation International a nonprofit U.S. environmental group, used a $100,000 Weeden grant to buy discounted Bolivian debt certificates. Then it swapped these with the Bolivian government in exchange for its agreement to expand the Beni Biosphere Reserve. The reserve, in Bolivia's Amazon basin, is home to 13 species of endangered plants and animals, more than 500 different varieties of birds and more species of trees than in all North America.

Last month Costa Rica launched a more systematic program, run through its Ministry of Natural Resources. Donors are being solicited to buy $5.4 million of outstanding debt, to be recycled through the central bank for local currency bonds. Revenues will go for land acquisition, park management and reforestation. For Costa Rica, reforestation also makes possible future export

Imagine that there was a way to preserve earnings from harvests of precious woods. The Third World's low credit rating these days works to multiply the value of an environmentally linked donation. Bankers' jitters about possible debt moratoriums and defaults have driven debt prices well below face value. Dollars used to buy up debt certificates thus yield far more than their normal equivalent in local funds. In the case of Costa Rica, a donation of $250,000 would pay for environmental bonds worth $500,000.

Swaps like these can meet only a fraction of outstanding Third World debt. Costa Rica's program aims to convert a little more than 10 percent of its total debt burden, Bolivia's about 15 percent. But the bonds give interested donors a way to belp conquer two urgent Third World problems. Governments and multinational institutions could play an even greater role. Senators Alfonse D'Amato of New York and Robert Kasten of Wisconsin and Representatives John Porter of Illinois and David Obey of Wisconsin are sponsoring legislation that would direct the U.S. representative at the World Bank to propose an environmentally linked debt relief program through the bank. The idea merits congressional attention and support.

On and On Until You Collapse

I was told by one of the World Health Organization experts: "Modern Western man is too inactive. He just doesn't do enough. The human body has been created for a certain amount of physical activity. Normal life means the intake of a certain amount of food which must be balanced with the output of a certain amount of energy." "We are so inactive," continued the WHO expert. "that we cannot eat little enough. People think two extra pieces of bread per day is neither here nor there. But two extra pieces of bread may make a great difference ... And remember: One bundred extra and superfluous calories per day means 36,500 calories per year.

I asked him what should a modern executive do? What sort of life should be lead? "If he is used to a sporting life, including jogging, he should go on. Il not, he should do something. Walking, swimming, even provided his heart is all right - climbing stairs will do good. He must lead a more physical life than most of them do." He stopped for a moment. "But it must be remembered that exercise has no lasting effect. It does you on retrospective good. If you stop, you are no better off than someone who has never done it. So you may as well save yourself the trouble. On the other hand, if you enjoy it and want to derive real benefit. go on and on and on. Until you collapse," "I realize that this is a joke," he said gloomily. "The point is that one is more likely to collapse if one does nothing than if one leads an active life, in moderation."

The Trouble At NASA Is Incurable

By T.A. Heppenheimer

LOS ANGELES — Astronaut Sally Ride, heading a task force on future efforts for the space program, has called for a lunar base as a step toward the ultimate goal: explora-tion and settlement of Mars. Her report comes less than a year after that of the President's National Commission on Space, which called for similarly far-reaching initiatives. Meanwhile, the space shuttle sits in its hangar and probably will not fly again until after the elections in 1988. Even then it will carry out only half the missinns per year that had been anticipated. The space station project has ballooned in cost from $8 billion in 1984 to $32 billion today, with no clear view in sight as to just what it will dn or who, except for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, wants it.

Valuable satellites sit on the ground for the lack of a ride, with no launch dates in sight. And through it all, NASA's budget con-tinues to increase, with $12.2 billing to be requested in fiscal 1989.

What's happening here? Why, amid failure and fecklessness, dn commissions continue to call for bold new goals, with presidential approval? It is easy, too easy, to say that NASA is simply a technological boondoggle full of leaf-rakers with engineering degrees.

Certainly no one can doubt that it exists largely to boost the local eco-nomies of Brevard County in Florida (Cape Canaveral), Madison County in Alabama (Marshall Space Center) and Harris County in Texas (Johnson Space Center). But the significance of NASA runs deeper.

ment of a style of governance that characterizes our century. This style features two elements: master planning and state power. The master plan is the work of a great guru: Chairman Mao, Karl Marx. Wernher von Braun. It amounts to a blueprint for the future, to draw on the technological farces of the age. And this blueprint, once fulfilled, will make life exciting, heroic, purposeful. To implement the plant there are the organs of state power. They will collect the taxes, organize the agen-cies and bureaucracies and carry forward the great work. They will overcome all obstacles, technical or political. They will embody the tide of History and usher in the future on the wings of the Plan.

That, of course, is a reasonable description of the great tyrannies of our age. We remember them for their cruelties, but their proponents saw their work differently. They believed that by sudden and dramatic acts they could harness the technology of our century, averturn old injustices and wrongs, and usher in a new age. The great totalitarianisms have been founded on the belief that the means existed whereby governments could shape the future, giving it a character that was to be exciting, heroic, suf-fused with a transcendent vision. In the United States, the Constitution and the limits on federal power prevented those attitudes from subjecting Americans to a tyranny based on mass enthusiasm. What Americans got instead was activist government. They were spared the prison camps and police informers with which dictators crush those who dare to challenge the master plans. But they were not spared the plans, the taxes, the bureaucracies, the agencies - and the ultimate failure of the hope that the future could be designed by experts in Washington.

What NASA Has Done Deserves Remembering HISTORY is time, and time has a way of flattening out. Peaks and valleys very quickly become bility (led by James Webb, who is finally being recognized as a great program manager); and oew tech-cologies in materials, electronics and computers. All of this came bome quite vividly recently when NASA preached that Apollo was not a singular event astronaut Sally Ride delivered a report to NASA on but an effort to develop a total capability that would enable America to dn anything in space that it wished. NASA is best known for its manned Mercury, Gemini and Apollo programs, but it also sent unmanned spacecraft to the planets, observed the stars, pioneered aeronautical research, introduced weather and navigation by satellite and launched the communication satellite era.

Io recalling the excitement of Neil Armstrong's first step on the moon, we forget names like Explorer, Viking, Mariner, Pioneer, Nimbus, Ranger, Surveyor, Voyager, Telstar, Syncom, Relay, Tiros and Skylab. In recalling Alan Shepard, John Glenn, Frank Borman, Buzz Aldrin and Mike Collins, we forget William Pickering, Homer Newell, Robert Jastrow and Hugh Dryden.

Cumulatively these projects, these people and the capabilities they nurtured enable us today to consider whether to establish a lunar base or fly men to Mars. Simply put, Apollo gave us a new way of thinking about ourselves, our universe and our place to that universe. "A one-shot foray," a "stunt"? Clearly no.

Communists from power in Moscow.

After Stalin's death, Soviet doctrine and perceptions of threat evolved. In 1956 it was decreed that war between the two social systems was no longer fatalistically inevitable. By 1960 the likelihood of a premeditated attack by the West had been discounted, but the danger of world war remained inherent in the nature of international rela-tions. In the late 1960s came the view that it was not inevitable that a world war would be nuclear and involve massive strikes on Russia. And in the early 1980s it was decided that a major conflict with the United States outside

Europe might be contained rather than inevitably escalate to world war.

This change in doctrine implies more than the possibility of the Soviets element of Russian defense policy has been the requirement to be able to the west. By downgrading this endur-

Soviet statements now play down the differences between the capitalist assert that nations are now interdependent, that national security depends on mutual security, that the arms race has reached a dangerous stage and that there would be no victors in a conventional world war, while nuclear war would destroy mankind.

appears to take them seriously. We see a new Soviet "line," and the evidence argues that it is not just a tactical adjustment but a genuine new direc-tion in defense and foreign policy.

How should the West respond? In principle, it should be delighted. For

There are powerful interests throughout the government, as well as among its beneficiaries, who do not want this to happen. That is why NASA will receive more money. That is why it will continue to pursue such efforts as the space station — no matter how costly, no matter that only NASA wants it. That is wby commissions like Sally Ride's will continue to call for bold new initiatives.

lives directly across the street and sees dogs, the gutter and the shoes of passers-by, from the patch of side walk that is her bome.

She moved there about a year ago. She is in her 40s, is very thin and has large eyes. Sometimes she talks heidly about teaching in New Jersey. Some-times, terrified by unnameable demons inside, she rises and screams.

Mostly she just lies huddled.

People give food from time to time, but not money, because creatures walk the streets stealing from the mad souls who lie in them. Sometimes she talks to people who bend over. Mostly she wants to be left alone. Sometimes she defecates where she lies.

A year, a full year. She does not know it yet, but one day, possibly Oct. 1, she will be taken away and put into a hospital. It is better that she does not know it because when anybody talks to her about shelter, she gets very angry and shouts. She will be fed, cleaned and given medicine and psychiatric help. Per-haps she will suffer always, but at least she will have received some succor. At last the city has decided it must try to do something about those who lie buddled in the streets, wrapped in their agonies of illness of the mind.

Actually it was not an abstract called "the city." but an individual, Edward Koch, the mayor. He saw and heard this woman, and some others. and decided that the meaning of the law had to be changed.

Until now, nobody could be removed from the streets who was not in "imminent" danger to himself or others. There are civil libertarians who insist on that interpretation of the law out of principle. Also, it allowed the city, already overburdened by trying to care for the homeless sane, to as suage its guilt at ignoring the street-dwellers who scream in their sleep.

The mayor decided that turning away from the mad was the true mad ness. He announced a policy of taking in for care those who were in danger of harming themselves in the "reason ably foreseeable future."

To him that means people who lie buddled in the street month after month, shivering in the winter without coats, shivering in the summer with tortures of the mind, unable to feed themselves or keep unsoiled...

Starting on Oct. 1, 28 more beds will be set aside in a special Bellevue Hos-pital unit. Street teams including psy-chiatric workers will decide who must be taken from the street. At the hospi-tal, more doctors and legal counsel will be involved. There will be a maximum stay of three weeks and then patients can be moved to state hospitals. the usual one-day grace period it was attacked hard. People who devote their lives to the homeless said the mayor's effort was so small as to be meaningless and ignored the magni-tude of the problem. State officials said the city's emergency rooms ware already overcrowded, so how could more people be squeezed in? These are reasonable complaints, and they have been brought up for years, ever since the 1960s, when New York State, and states around the na-

Tranquilizers made the dumping possible. And civil libertarians had in 1967, a concept intended to enhance deterrence. Instead it prompted the Soviet conventional buildup in plenty of examples of cruel and unlair the 1970s that so alarmed NATO. Similarly, the 1983 deployment of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles to Euinstitutionalization. Also, it saved lots and lots of state money, which was nice for state governments. But mayors around America are now confronted with great numbers of people who indeed should be insitutionalized. And the cities do not have the beds or the doctors or the money to deal with them. : The mayor's critics seem to be saying that if you cannot do a great deal.

do nothing. Down at City Half, the mayor says this is just plain crazy. If he can carry out his plan, 500 suffering people a year will get help. Some thing is something; maybe this would force more money from the state. In any case, the Koch definition of the account for much of NATO's mudlaw is far more sensible and decent dled response to Mikhail Gorbachev's than the do-nothing interpretation.

But Ed Koch will have to pay attention to this problem himself. If he arms control initiatives. If the Soviets are set on military expansion, arms does not really provide the extra beds control negotiations play into their hands, as Hitler taught us in the 1930s. and medical care, and it all just blows about reasons and excuses. He has made it his problem and his job; he will have to report to him and his job; he But if the danger stems from the military capabilities ranged on either side, arms limitations and reductions offer will have to report to himself.

At least the mayor has as facing one truth about New York: If your leg is broken, the city will take you away; if your mind is broken, you just lie there forever.

An Unanswered Prayer For Strength in the Dollar

By JONATHAN ENGEL

ARIS — The last thing one expects to bear in the bond market is a prayer for higher interest rates. But that's just Marke that we have been a like the track of what many market participants were fervently offering last week, in hopes that a bold rate increase by the Federal Reserve would bolster the dollar.

Some contend that if the Fed wants to strengthen the dollar as well as to squeeze inflationary expectations out of the financial markets, then its monetary tightening has just begun. Expect a 6.5 to 7 percent discount rate by January, they say. Others assert that the central bank was signaling that it did not want to reverse the dollar's decline, only to moderate it. Either way, the Fed's action left long-term bond investors dissat-

Io New York, the dollar rose to 1.7970 Deutsche marks from 1,7910 DM on Thursday, and to 142.00 ven after 140.75. The benchmark 30-year U.S. Treasury bond fell 3/32, to edge the yield up to 9.46 percent from 9.45, a full percentage point higher than in mid-July. Some analysts are predicting a 10 percent yield by the end of December.

"The bood market was disappointed by the dollar response."

said David Morrison, chief international economist at Goldman Sachs International in London, noting that investors were hoping to see some currency atrength before the U.S. merchandise trade figures for July, due on Friday. A deficit of $15 billion to $17 billion is expected, compared with $15.7 billion in June, a figure that triggered the recent dollar and bond-market plunge.

NLESS the dollar rises by about 1 or 2 pfennigs, Mr. Morrisoo contends, "It's going to be very vulnerable to that figure." He expects a $17 billion deficit. But, he said. the rate rise will have a more lasting benefit, by demonstrating the inflation-fighting intentions of the oew Federal Reserve Board

"It lets the world financial markets know that Alan Greenspan will not dither too long if something needs to be done," Mr. Morrison said. "From a longer-term perspective it establishes some kind of credibility that be's not just a Reagan poodle."

In its statement accompanying the rate increase, the Fed stressed the need to contain "potential inflationary pressures." Since the latest indicators show inflation under control, analysts decoded that comment largely as an overriding concern for the he with the transfer of

"was also worted that the foreign investors vital to the recent strength of the U.S. securities market would lose confidence in Participation of the National dollar-denominated assets.

"The dollar is the key and the dollar is under pressure," said Samoel D. Kahan, chief financial economist at Kleinwort Benson Government Securities Inc. in Chicago, "The move by the Fed in my opinion was purely dollar-related," especially with the July trade figure looming. He is forecasting a $1 billion deterioration, even after adjusting for seasonal variations, something the goverument figures don't do. But, he added, the higher

"is more to slow the decline" of the dollar, not arrest it. If the dollar's weakness had not spilled over to the securities markets, he said, the central bank might have taken a lessdecisive atep and merely continued to push up the rate for federal funds, the reserves that banks lend each other overnight. For their part, if bond investors thought the increases in U.S. interest rates would slow down the economy and inflation, then long-term bond yields would have eased, narrowing the gap with short-term rates, he said. That has oot happened, because "it was not clear that this move in the discount rate will be enough to change matters appreciably," Mr. Kahan said. In April 1984, he noted, when the Fed last raised the discount rate, the market reacted the same way to the half-point rise to 9 percent, but the See EUROBONDS, Page 11

Expanded Tri-Star Gets More Silver for the Screen

But Film Company Faces Obstacles

By Geraldine Fabrikant New York Times Service

NEW YORK - After Coca-Cola Co. announced on Sept. 1 that it would merge its entertainment operations into Tri-Star Pictures Inc., Victor A. Kaufman received more than 100 congratulatory phone calls. Even Mr. Kaufman, Tri-Star's seemingly unflappable chairman. seemed nonplussed by all the attention.

"I was amazed at the reaction," he said.
Yet the fuss was inevitable. Overnight, the 44-year-old former Wall Street lawyer had become one of the industry's most powerful players. Mr. Kaufman had already made a name for himself with Tri-Star, persuading Coca-Cola, Time Inc.'s Home Box Office and CBS Inc. to form the company five years ago in an innovative joint venture that came with an oversized bankroll and ready-made distribution networks. Largely because of its Kaufman-engineered financial structure, Tri-Star prospered, posting operating profits of $21 million last year on sales of $254 million.

But now, as the designated president and chief executive of Tri-Star's oew incarnation, Columbia Pietures Entertainment Inc., Mr. Kaufman will lead a company with combined sales of more than $1.5 billion and $3.1 billion in assets. Besides overseeing Tri-Star's movie, television and theater chain operations, he will be in charge of Coke's far larger Columbia Pictures and the soft-drink company's two other production companies, Embassy Communications and Merv Griffin TV.

Mr. Kanfman's coup comes with a critical question mark, however. His strength has been in financial matters, industry experts say, and his management skills have been tested on only a modest playing

"Victor Kaufman has basically been known as a very innovative deal maker," said Harold Vogel, an entertainment analyst at Merrill Lyncb & Co. "Now be will have to prove himself in managing and running two large organizations where Hollywood-sized egos" are

Columbia Pictures - like Tri-Star - is oot doing particularly well these days in producing box-office hits, for example, and many industry analysts say it is only a matter of time before Mr. Kanfman clashes with Columbia's strong-willed chief, David Puttnam. Should Mr. Puttnam leave, a bost of other management changes could follow. In addition, Mr. Kaufman must decide whether to merge Coca-

Cola's growing television business into Tri-Star's fledgling TV operations. Just a few weeks ago, Coke Television's chief executive, Frank I. Biondi Jr., left the company to join Viacom International, leaving a vacuum at the top.

And Mr. Kaufman will still have to answer to Coke. In turning over its TV and movie operations to Tri-Star, Coke took a 49 percent stake in the merged company, and installed its president, Donald R.

Victor A. Kaufman, top left, president of the newly established Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc., with the symbols from the merged companies' two biggest hits, 'Rambo: First Blood Part II' and 'Ghostbusters.'

Operating Income

Coca-Cola Entertainment is operating income of $235 million tast year fair exceeded Tn-Star's $21.4 million, but was small compared to the company's soft drank sector

Despite these problems, industry insiders say the odds are on Mr. Kaufman's side. He has made few false moves in the movie business, they oote, a skill reflected in the careful, often halting, manner in which he chooses his words.

For his part, Mr. Kaufman says he's "excited" by the challenge of See TRI-STAR, Page 13

The National Association of Purchasing Management's monthly report said its composite index of leading indicators rose to 59.9 percent in August from 58.2 percent in July. The August reading is the highest level the index has hit since percent in April 1984.

Readings above 50 percent indicate that the economy is expanding and those under 50 indicate it is

The report said that for the first eight months of 1987 the index averaged 56.1 percent and that the growth rate through August would produce a 1987 expansion of 3.7 percent in the gross national prod-uct if it were maintained for the rest of the year, Gross national product measures the value of a nation's total output of goods and services.

The August improvement was based on reports by U.S. purchasing managers of greater numbers of new orders, larger inventories, higher rates of production, generally higher prices and more jobs than in July. The managers also said that the speed of vendor deliveries slowed, another indication of increased production.

"The economy continued its vig-orous growth io August," said Rob-ert J, Bretz, the association's chair-

Marubeni Asks Chinese to Join In Car Venture

BEIJING — Marubeni Corp. of Japan has proposed a $3.6 hillion venture to build passenger and commercial vehicles in what would be the largest Japa-nese joint venture in China, the official Economie Information newspaper said Sunday.

The paper said the proposal was made to the state-owned People's Construction Bank of China. It involves building a plant in a coastal area of China to produce annually 300,000 passenger cars and commercial vehicles with engines of 1300 cc and 1500 cc.

The paper said the proposed factory would start producing by 1990, reaching full capacity in 1999, Local content would reach 80 percent by 1995.

Marubeni is preparing to pre-sent the proposal formally to the Chinese government in late October, the paper said. Japanese equity investment in China has been very limited and no Japanese automaker has made a large-scale investment in China.

Nissan Is Polishing Its U.S. Image

By Donald Woutat

Los Angeles Times Service
LOS ANGELES — The crunch had to come sooner or later for Japanese automakers in the United States, and the first to feel the squeeze has been Nissan Motor Corp. U.S.A.

Analysts said it had quality problems and a muddled image, which put it in a weak position to combat the falling dollar, South Korean competitors and a rally by Detroit auto companies.

This month, Nissan is completing a shake-up that has left its U.S. sales and marketing arm with a completely oew management and its employees wonder-ing who they will report to next. It is the latest m a series of actions that dealers and nthers hope are positioning Nissan for a turnaround in its fortunes.

"The class of the Japanese are Toyota and Honda," says a market researcher who specializes in Japanese companies. "Nissan has really fallen out of that first tier and into a second category with Mazda and the rest.".

Nissan's executive shuffle took place quietly over 18 months, which was much faster than Nissan was able to effec-tively change the name of its U.S. car models from Datsun. The move, begun in 1981, puzzled many who cite it as the start of the company's troubles. Some customers still think that Datsun and Nissan are two different

After Toyota, Nissan had long been the No. 2 Japanese seller of cars in recently profitable U.S. market. But critics say Nissan borrowed the wrong page from the Detroit story and allowed its quality to slip and its cars to set stodgy.

Honda shot past Nissan in U.S. sales, huoyed by its own reputation for quality and inno-vation and its ability to skirt import quotas as the first Japanese automaker to build cars in the United States beginning in 1982. In the Japanese market, Toyata increased its dominance.

Meanwhile, Japan's "Big Three" - Toyota, Nissan and Honda - found themselves competing with improved Detroit cars, an ever-lengthening

Mr. King's duties will be assumed by Thomas D. Mignanelli, a highly regarded Ford Motor Co. executive hired earlier this year. These changes have occurred in the aftermath of what is described as a rebound in the quality of Nissan's cars during the past year. A survey by market researchers J.D. Power & Associates, of Westlake Village, Califormia, called Nissan the top Japanese enmpany in nverall quality, trailing only Mercedes-Benz in a survey of all 1987 models. A year earlier, it ranked fourth behind Mercedes, Toyota and Honda.

"Nissan has made a huge leap in product quality," said John Hammond, a J.D. Power analyst. "It's the first positive thing Nissan has done in a couple of

Piquet Wins, Solidifies Formula One Lead

MONZA, Italy (AP) — Nelson Piquet of Brazil drove his Williams-Honda to victory Sunday in the Italian Grand Prix, scoring an unprecedented fourth triumph to the event and strengthening his lead in the world championship standings. Piquet drove the 50 laps, totaling 290 kilometers (180.2 miles), in one hour, 14:47.707 minutes at an average speed of 232.636 kph. He beat Brazilian Ayrton Senna, runner-up in a Louis-Honda, by 1.8 seconds. Nigel Mansell, Piquet's British teammate of Piquet, lagged third, 49.03 seconds off the pace.

Piquet's third victory of the year and 20th of his career gave him 63 points after 11 races in the 16-round championship. Senna has 49 points and Mansell 43.

Hill Takes WBA Title From Stewart on TKO

ATLANTIC CITY, New Jersey (UPI) — Virgil Hill, a silver medalist at a middleweight at the 1984 Olympic Games, stopped Leslie Stewart to win the World Boxing Association light heavyweight championship here Saturday night.

Hill floored Stewart twice in the fourth round before referee Vinnie Ramone stopped the fight. Hill improved to 19-0 with 13 knockouts. Stewart, who was making the first defense of the title he won from Marvin Johnson to May, fell to 24-2. Meanwhile, in Bangkok, Sot Chitrlada of Thailand retain his World Boxing Council flyweight championship by knocking out South Korean Racki Ahn in the fourth round. Sot is 19-1 lifetime: Racki is 22-3.

Sindelar Has 8-Shot Bulge in B.C. Open Golf

ENDICOTT, New York (AP) - Joey Sindelar 2-under-par 69 increased his lead to eight strokes after Saturday's third round of the R.C. Open golf tournament.

Sindelar, who went 65-63 through the first two rounds, was at 16-under 197. His margin over Jeff Sluman (68-205) is the largest 54-hole lead on the PGA tour this year.

Hong Kong

Bouts of profit-taking failed to halt the dizzying rally of the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, as the beliwether Hang Seng Index finished at a record 3.654.48, up 42.74 on the week.

Predictions of corrections were dashed as the market bounded out of a long weekend with selective buying on Tuesday. Mild profittaking saw the Hang Seng shed 8.42 points on Wednesday, its first retreat in six sessions. But bargain-hunting oo Thursday more than made up for the loss.

There was more profit-taking Friday, which limited the Hang Seng's gain to only 0.53. On Sept. 4. 1986, the Hang Seng closed at 1.946.70. That means bulls have pushed the index up nearly 88 percent on the year. Volume was 2.67 billion Hong Kong dollars, up from the previous week's 1.82 billion.

London

Shares and gilts improved last week on the London Stock Exchange, in somewhat subdued trading after the bank holiday Monday. The tone was boosted by a batch of good company results, a firm pound and reassuring comments from Nigel Lawson, the chancellor of the Exchequer, about interest rate prospects. Worse-than-expected trade figures for July and disappointing figures for Britain's gold and currency reserves in August had only a brief depressing effect.

Gains were checked on Friday, notably for gilts, by the rise in U.S. interest rates, which sent Wall Street into retreat. The Financial Times industrial share index closed up 22.3 points on the week, at 1,782.1. The gold mine index rose to its best level for nearly a month as renewed incidents in the Gull spurred precious metal prices, considered a haven in times of tension.

Consumer stocks were particularly firm, with foods and building stocks drawing support from good interim results from Cadbury Schweppes, Hillsdown Holdings and Blue Circles much in evidence.

Tokyo

After hitting a record high Tuesday, the Tokyo Stock Exchange closed the week sharply down after news that a major chemical concern had had serious losses on trading in government bonds.

The downward movement accelerated is half-day trading Saturday, after the U.S. Federal Reserve Board increased its discount rate.

The Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues closed out the week at 25,355.35 year down 692.82 from the previous week.

The Nikkei sourced to a record 26,118.42 yes on Tuesday, buoyed by overnight advances on Wall Street. Profit-taking on Wednesday thes took 171.82 yen off the index.

The decline became a headlong fall on Thursday when Tateho Chemical Industries, a medium-size company listed on the Osaka Stock Exchange announced losses of 20 billion yen on its trading in Japanese governmen port similar losses sparked a wave of sching.

The French Rumor Industry

DARIS - The creation and propagation of rumors is one of France's most thriving cottage industries. Last winter the actress Isabelle Adjani had to appear on television to prove (a) that she did not have AIDS and (b) that she was not dead. vate life doesn't matter, a Gary Hart situation could never happen here," Kapferer says. "On the other hand there is a taboo here on the subject of health and rumor thrives in domains that are taboo. A rumor is what cannot be said officially, the moment it is printed it is not rumor." French politicians are subject to a great variety of rumors: a former prime minister is said to have emptied the cellars of his official residence when he was dismissed, another's first wife died in circumstances claimed to be mysterious. In 1981 François Mitterrand was said to be suffering from

Since 1965 at least 20 French towns have circulated what is known as the "ruineur d'Orléans," which deals with the disappearance of young women from the fitting rooms of clothing shops (the women were supposedly drugged and sold to white slavers). No part of the rumor has ever been proved but it remains amazingly hardy, a sign of the persistence of a strong current of anti-Semitism since most of the clothing store owners were Jewish.

The Adjani rumor probes a basic point, Kapferer says, which is that not everyone is susceptible to becoming a subject of rumor. "The image must already be fragile," he says. "Adjani was ide-

Hermeneutic Intentions 10

By William Safire WASHINGTON — Hermes, the Greek god of speech and travel, commerce and thievery, who also answers to the Roman name of Mercury, is back in the news.

The chief of the manuscript division of the Library of Congress, lames H. Hutson, was poring over handwritten documents of the Founding Fathers (that phrase was Warren Harding's nice alliteration - earlier students called the Constitution-makers "the framers") and came across a draft of the Bill of Rights in the writing of Connecticut's Roger Sherman, which had gone unnoticed for a couple of cen-

Hutson says "that the documentation of the Constitution is so corrupt that we cannot certainly know what the framers said; and if we cannot know what they said, how can we know what they intended?" Attorney General Edwin L. Meese 3d, he told reporters peering at the Bill of Rights draft, "has ex ressed the notion that judges, in interpreting the Constitution, should be close to the original intent of those who wrote it." Then he called in Hermes: "But to try to recover original intent from records that are non-existent or not faithful to actual proceedings may be an impossible hermeneutic assignment.

Hermeneutic came into English more than three centuries ago as a kind of antonym for ewetic, which means "inventive." Wrote Richard Burthogge, a 17th-century theological author, "Ratiocination Specu-lative, is either Euretick or Hermeneutick. Inventive or Interpretative." Scholars working in hiblical interpretation took up the word to denote their close examination and explication of texts, using it to distinguish that eye-straining interpretation from exegesis, or the practical exposition of Scripture hy preachers. Hermeneutics hecame the art or science of interpretation. But then the word was used to cover more. Hugh J. Silverman, coeditor of the 1985 "Hermeneutics and Deconstruction" and a philosophy professor at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, says, "The inter- of interpretation suggests 'between,' Interpretation is the matter of determining what the basic message, meaning or con-

next is - and that requires not only Hermes, the interpreter of Olyman ian messages, readily undersonal interpreter of Olyman is to be has to feel of the control o the interpreter and interpreted but also the in-between itself."

Hermes, the interpreter of Olympian messages, readily understands that; be has to figure out what Zens meant, what his own translation does to the original message and how his interpretation will be understood by mere mortals.

The political argument about "original intent" now going on among lawyers, political scientists and historians is the latest manifestation of an argument raging for the past 20 years among linguists, philosophers and literary entites about bermeneutics and one of its subsections, deconstruction.
